Grand Jury No-bills Mother in Child's Death

Houston, TX -- A grand jury on Tuesday (Dec. 9) declined to return an indictment of injury to a child against a mother whose three-year-old son died inside her pickup truck after she left him there.

Grand jurors no-billed Amanda Boone in the death of Cameron Boone last Aug. 14. According to investigators, the mother placed the child in the back of the vehicle's extended cab to take him to his daycare facility before she started her morning shift at a northwest medical center.

She inadvertently drove to her workplace and left him inside the vehicle, where she discovered his body after her shift ended that day.

"Grand jurors were provided with all the relevant facts in this case," District Attorney Kenneth Magidson said. "They reviewed that evidence and chose not to indict. We respect their decision."
